An Account of the melancholy Diſaſter that has befallen the City of Montaban in France, from an inundation of the River Tarn, which began November 14, 1766, and laid One Thouſand Two Hundred Houſes in Ruins.

MONTABAN is ſituated on the ſide of a hill, and its ſuburbs on the banks of the rivers Tarn and Teſcon. On Friday, November 14, about nine at night, the Tarn began to ſwell, and continued to encreaſe ſlowly till eleven on Saturday night. From that time till twelve on Sunday night the increaſe was more rapid; and then the waters remained at a ſtand till three on Sunday morning; this ſtillneſs of the river lulled the inhabitants into a general ſecurity and hope that the waters would preſently abate, and conſequently prevented the removal of their effects from their houſes on its banks. But this ſecurity was of ſhort continuance; for at three the torrent began to pour down with encreaſed violence; inſomuch, that at day-break, the ſuburb of Sapiac ſituate between the Tarn and the Teſcon, ſtood in need of every poſſible aſſiſtance; and notwithſtanding the moſt diligent activity, in the courſe of that day ſeveral houſes and garden-walls were carried away. At ſix the floods continuing to augment, two thirds of the church ſquare was under water, and at nine the whole was overflowed.

Hitherto the whole attention of the citizens had been directed to that unfortunate ſuburb; the ville Bourbonne, (except that quarter of it called le Triel, ſituate on the brink of the rivulet, containing a few inconſiderable houſes only) being ſituated higher than Sapiac, was thought out of danger, and the inhabitants of Sapiac and le Triel having been ſent to lie in the city barracks after placing all their moveables in their garrets, every thing was judged pretty ſecure. But this ſecurity was very ſoon interrupted; for M. de Golgue, intendant of the province, perceiving the flood ſtill to increaſe, and foreſeeing the danger to be greater than the people apprehended, went in the night to the ſuburb of the ville Bourbonne, and carefully examined every houſe wherever he perceived danger, and drove the inhabitants out; and to this precaution many hundreds owe their lives; for at eleven the ſame night the vaults of one of the ſtrongeſt and moſt ſubſtantial houſes on the river ſide gave way; the houſe fell, and that fall was followed by that of ſeveral others in the ſame row. Theſe ſucceſſive and continual falls engaged M. de Gorgue to inſpect the houſes, whoſe greater diſtance from the river ſeemed to flatter them with the hopes of ſafety. That deplorable night was wholly ſpent in ſaving the peoples lives, by tearing them, as it were, from their dwellings.

The floods continued to increaſe, and redoubled their alarms. The inhabitants of the city, ſeperated from the ſuburb by a bridge, ran to ville Bourbonne. At ſeven o'clock in the morning of Tueſday November 18, the floods began to abate, and their decreaſe continued till noon. Hope immediately began to ſpring up in every boſom, but was ſoon ſtifled by the fall of the greateſt part of the ſuburb of Gaſſeras, adjoining to that of ville Bourbonne: And it was perceived that all the houſes, even thoſe that were yet at a diſtance from the waters, were tottering, and reſted only on a looſe earth which the waters had already undermined.

At noon the ſwell begun again, and was continually augmenting. The conſternation was then univerſal. Orders were then given to remove off all the effects. Perſons of all ranks were deſired to aſſiſt in the removal, and all the carts and carriages were engaged to make the removal the more ſpeedy. The tribunals of juſtice opened their halls, the monks their convents and cloyſters; and the churches were alſo offered as repoſitories for the effects of the people. The inhabitants of ville Bourbonne abandoned ſucceſſively their houſes; and the inhabitants of the city, with an earneſtneſs which did honour to humanity, received their unhappy neighbours, and with marks of true tenderneſs, endeavoured to aſſwage a grief which had no bounds.

During the conſternation that had ſeized upon all ranks in this lamentable ſcene of diſtreſs, another calamity no leſs preſſing, though not ſo immediately perceived, preſented itſelf to the intendant; the mills being every where overflowed, threatened Montaban with the want of bread. In this exigence, M. de Gorgue ſent orders to all the upland towns to ſend in flour to its relief; he opened the magazines of reſerve in the city, and cauſed the flour to be carried to the Cordelier's church, where centinels were placed over it, and the magiſtrates went to ſee the diſtribution made in their preſence.

At four o'clock the ſame afternoon, a general proceſſion was made, at which all the clergy, as well ſecular as regular, aſſiſted: During this proceſſion, the ſtrongeſt effects of general conſternation became ſtill more conſpicuous. Terror had ſeized every mind, for they began to fear for the ſafety of the bridge. Some men allured by the hope of gain, had ſtopped ſome trees, which were borne down the river by the force of the torrent, and had faſtened them to the bridge. Theſe trees had ſtopped others, ſo that their weight was ſuſtained only by the piles of the bridge, and, added to that of the water, was become immenſe and almoſt irreſiſtable. M. de Gorgue cauſed thoſe trees to be cut looſe, and large quantities of iron, and other heavy bodies to be placed on that part of the bridge, which was expoſed to the greateſt and moſt forcible rapidity of the torrent, and by theſe wiſe precautions ſaved it.

The inundation increaſed during that whole day, and continued ſtill augmenting till ſeven in the morning, November 19, when the waters were thirty-two feet above the common water level; ſuch an extraordiny inundation has occaſioned ſundry neighbouring villages to be entirely overflowen, and has produced the greateſt ravages. In the plains, the buildings have been overwhelmed, the grain waſhed away, the cattle drowned, and the greateſt part of the inhabitants found their only ſafety in ſudden flight, or in climbing high trees, where the horrors of famine were joined to the dreadful ſpectacle of beholding their dwellings deſtroyed, and their effects carried away by the flood.

The waters began to abate at ſeven, as has been ſaid, and continued to decreaſe till the next day (Nov. 20) at noon, when they encreaſed again till ſix at night, tho' the whole riſe was not above four inches. At ſix the abatement began again, and continued till Friday (Nov. 21) when at four, the flood having diminiſhed about eight feet, gave hopes that the river would ſoon re-enter its uſual bounds. This hope was very flattering, but our ſorrow was encreaſed by the new and ſucceſſive falls of a number of houſes in ville Bourbonne, Sapiac, and Gaſſeras; for while the waters diminiſhed, the foundations of the buildings being ſapped, the greateſt number of them fell down. It was then that the moſt ſubſtantial houſes were ſeen to open on all ſides, while others, without any ſuch apparent alterations, ſunk down, and a whole intire ſtreet, called de Cauſſat, totally diſappeared.

All theſe horrors were ſtill augmented by freſh alarms; at five in the evening, the increaſe of the waters began again, and continued till the next day at noon (Saturday Nov. 22.) This flood was ſo rapid, that it aroſe to an elevation very near as conſiderable as that of Wedneſday morning; for it ſtopt at only two feet below the laſt. The vicar generals ordered freſh prayers to be made in every church, and that they ſhould be continued till the calamity was at an end. But at noon the flood decreaſed again, and continued to abate till monday the 24th of November, when the river ran in its uſual current.

The picture of ſuch an event preſents immenſe loſſes, and horrible devaſtations. As yet they are unable to aſcertain the amount of the damage, becauſe there is not one minute in which they do not apprehend the ſudden fall of ſome houſe or other. In the ſuburbs of Sapiac, ville Bourbonne, and Gaſſeras, and in the adjacent country about twelve hundred houſes have been deſtroyed. The mill of Aibaredes, and fulling mills, are entirely waſhed away. The mill of Sapiac is conſiderably damaged, and the lateral wall of Sapiacon totally thrown down. The loſs of moveables, effects, corn and cattle is without any bounds, and cannot be computed.

But the greateſt of all loſſes is that which commerce will ſuffer by the deſtruction of the manufactures, and the looms and workſhops; by the diſcouragement which ſuch a cruel event has thrown on every mind, and by the wandering life of an innumerable number of workmen and artificers, who ſhed bitter tears on being unemployed.

To the PRINTER.

THERE can be no good grounds for believing what ſome of the Public Papers have mentioned, that the Earl of Bute will ſhortly have an important poſt in the Adminiſtration; for he muſt be too prudent to alter his reſolution to the contrary.

The daily experiments that are endeavoured to be made on the public mind, by impoſing on ignorant and credulous Printers, by means of the few emiſſaries and runners of parties, only ſerve to occaſion diſappointment, for the opinions of wiſe and honeſt men are not to be ſtaggered or altered by ſuch arts.

Our only able and glorioufly-honoſt Miniſter has now given ſuch a new and unparalleled proof of the greatneſs of his mind, and the rectitude of his heart, as ſhould make every hydra-head of faction bend under that load of infamy, with which compariſon muſt burthen it. Noble principles cannot be diſcredited; nor can great abilities, guarded by long experience againſt falſehood, craft, or deception, become eaſily jockeyed, or ſucceſsfully entangled by the ſnares of either falſe aſſociates or open adverſaries. Lord Chatham's meaſures have been generally approved, and thoſe of his oppoſers as generally deteſted, on the principles of genuine Patriotiſm, truth, and ſolid ſenſe; while how very little, in the eyes of men, have the endeavours, uſed to get the appearance of a popular voice in their favour, rendered thoſe who have ſo employed them! It is ſurely time men ſhould ſee their error in endeavouring to impoſe on a people who have underſtanding, and will judge from experience, which long has been, as it continues to be, entirely in his favour, and to their diſadvantage. I mean ſuch men as are unprejudiced by corrupt influence or ſelfiſh attachment, and who are honeſt and wiſe.

The ſagacious and impartial Public will not ſacrifice national intereſt to the gratification of reſentment, vanity, or pride, even in thoſe who otherwiſe do not ſtand low in general opinion; but will hold it at leaſt weakneſs in them raſhly to oppoſe their prejudices to general welfare. And great pity it is, that thoſe, who may want leaſt, will not think and act moſt for that Public in which they ſhould and may figure ſo highly to their own honour, if they would think and act rightly for the good of the State; which none can do who oppoſe mere pretenſion to ſolid merit, and ſet ſelf-gratification againſt general welfare, becauſe the moſt aſſiduous promotion of the latter muſt, and will be, conſidered as the touch-ſtone of all worth.

London, April 21, 1767. HONESTUS.

LONDON, APRIL 20.

WE hear that an elegent chapel is intended ſoon to be built in Richmond garden, for the uſe of the Royal Family, during their reſidence there in the ſummer.

It is ſaid that their Royal Highneſſes the Dukes of Glouceſter and Cumberland, are ſoon to be created ſtaff officers on the Iriſh eſtabliſhment.

By the death of the Dutcheſs of Argyll, a jointure of 16000l. per annum, devolves to his Grace the preſent Duke of Argyll.

By the death of the Dutcheſs of Argyll, the Chancellor of the Exchequer will get 100000l. in right of Lady Dalkeith.

We hear from good authority, that the examinations relating to a certain great company, has occaſioned their affairs to take a new turn; and it is now become a ſerious conſideration, whether the trade ſhall be opened, or the monopoly continued.

Extract of a letter from Venice, March 27.

"There is advice from Dalmatia, that three colonies who inhabit the banks of the Cattara, a rude and untoward ſet of people, have taken up arms, and entered the trading city of Buda. The Governor of the province immediately aſſembled the troops to oppoſe them, but we are not yet minutely acquainted with the reſult. What gives great uneaſineſs to the Senate is, that the inſurgents, at their firſt riſing, maſſacred ſeveral Turkiſh merchants, and pillaged their Houſes; ſo that the Republic, to avoid the reſentment of the Ottaman Porte, will probably be obliged to repair theſe miſchiefs by the payment of a ſum of money."

Letters from Paris, dated April 10, ſays, "The Abbe Rochon, a celebrated aſtronomer, embarked lately at one of our ports, in a ſhip bound for the African coaſt. He propoſes to obſerve at ſea, by means of an inſtrument which he has brought to perfection, the eclipſes of Jupiter's Satellites, which will happen during the courſe of his voyage. It is certain, that exact obſervations of theſe eclipſes, which are very frequent, might ſerve to determine the longitude with preciſion. The trial which the Abbe Rochon has already made of his inſtrument, gives him room to hope for a happy ſucceſs in his enterpriſe; and he invites all aſtronomers carefully to make correſponding obſervations upon the ſame Satellites.

The ſame letters add, that "the affairs of Britanny are ſtill far from being ſettled; the Nobleſſe refuſing to acquieſce either with the other two orders, or the King's Commiſſaries; and, beſides, they continue to inſiſt upon the Parliament's being re-eſtabliſhed upon its forming footing."

Letters from Warſaw adviſe, that the Diſſidents, confederated at Thorn, had reſolved to ſend a ſolemn deputation to the King, to repreſent to his Majeſty, that the moſt urgent neceſſity had obliged them to enter into that league, and to beſeech him at the ſame time not to take it in an ill light. This reſolution, it ſeems, occaſions more ſurpriſe than the confederacy itſelf; and people are very impatient to ſee whether the King will receive the Deputies, or not; and, in the firſt caſe, what anſwer he will give them.

The demand this year from North-America, for Birmingham and Sheffield wares, fall many thouſand pounds ſhort of thoſe for ſome years preceding.

An additional duty of three pence per ell is talked of to be laid upon all Linen cloth above one yard wide, which ſhall be imported into this kingdom from foreign parts, excepting from Holland and Flanders.

Alſo an additional duty of three pence per ell upon all canvas drilling, to be imported.

The learned and ingenious Dr. Prieſtly, in his hiſtory of electricity lately publiſhed, when treating of the utility of metallic conductors, in preventing miſchiefs to churches and other buildings from lightening; and having given ſome account of the almoſt demolition of St. Bride's ſteeple, about three years ago, takes notice, that "his readers at a diſtance from London will hardly believe him, when he informs them, that the elegant ſpire, which has been great part of his ſection, and which has been twice damaged by lightening, is now repaired without any metallic conductor to guard it in caſe of a third ſtroke."

Extract of a Letter from Penington in Lincolnſhire, dated March 31.

"A very melancholy affair happened here lately. An officer on the recruiting ſervice, a young man of moſt engaging manners, and who was ſaid to be the eldeſt ſon of a gentleman of conſiderable family and fortune in the Weſt of England, made his addreſſes to a young lady of this town, who conſented to marry him. The morning after their marriage, the Captain ſeemed, all on a ſudden, to be in great emotion. He looked at his young wife with eyes flaſhing with indignation, calling out, "What, my dear, you have got black hair, have you? I'll ſoon cure that;" and immediately drawing his ſword, he ſtabbed her three times in a moſt barbarous manner, ſo that ſhe expired in a few minutes. The family alarmed by the noiſe, came into the room, and found the unhappy gentleman tearing his hair, and crying bitterly over the body of his wife. He was inſtantly put under confinement, and has continued raving ever ſince. The Lieutenant Colonel of his regiment has written a moſt polite and humane letter to the father of the young lady, condoling with him on his affliction, and acquainting him that the Captain was ſubject to violent fits of lunacy, one of which has been the ſad occaſion of the mournful accident. This may ſerve as a warning to young ladies in country towns, not to yeild too haſtily to their paſſion for a ſtranger, however agreeable, but to wait till they are fully informed of his character and ſituation."

APRIL 21. They write from Leghorn, that Mr. O'Dur, an Irish Engineer of great experience, together with a number of French and English officers, discharged on the conclusion of the late war, has entered into the service of the Corsican General.

They write from Petersburgh, that the persons appointed by the Empress for making discoveries of the Strait which separates Asia and America, were to set out the 13th of April, to make the rout of the islands of Beering and Kamtschatka, and afterwards proceed on the discovery of a north east passage to the Indian ocean.

Private letters from Berlin mention, that Prince Ferdinand of Brunswick is soon to re-enter into the Prussian service.

Several English vessels with American corn, which missed the markets at Leghorn and Rome, were arrived at Porto Veccio in the island of Corsica when the last letters came away.

It is said a regular form of Government is soon to be established, by the appointment of proper officers, for the colony at Black River, Muskito Shore, several petitions having lately been presented to the Board of Trade on that subject.

Letters from Warsaw, dated March 30, say, "On the 22nd instant Prince Repnin, Ambassador from Russia, presented a declaration to the King signed by the Empress, by which she demands that the Dissidents of Poland and Lithuania be forthwith restored to the enjoyment of their ancient rights and privileges. This declaration sets forth, that her Imperial Majesty, in conjunction with other powers, guarantees of the treaty of Oliva, not being able to effect the restoration abovementioned, by her amicable representations, found herself obliged to order 30,000 of her troops to enter this kingdom; that these troops will not leave the kingdom till the Dissidents are restored to their privileges, and are upon an equal footing with the other citizens; and that, in order to accomplish this in a legal manner, it will be necessary that the King should convoke an extraordinary Diet, &c. This declaration has made different impressions upon the Members of the Council of the Senate, whose embarrassment upon this occasion is more easy to be conceived than described. In the mean time it is to be observed, that as the Court of Russia makes use of force upon this occasion, we cannot see how the Republic can oppose it."

On Saturday night a poor man at Wapping, eat two fowls and a pound of pickled pork, and drank a gallon of beer, in a quarter of an hour, for a wager of a crown bowl of punch, the greatest part of which he afterwards also drank.

The SMUGGLED SCOTCHMAN.

AN ANECDOTE.

A Nobleman at Paris asked Lady R——— why it was in general remarked abroad by foreigners, that the Scotch, who travelled, were men of parts and learning, while the English were generally wanting in both? Her Ladyship, with her usual vivacity, replied, that only fools went out of England; but for Scotland, none but fools would stay in it. A Scotch Nobleman, neither famous for parts or learning, Lord ——, observed her Ladyship was right with regard to the Scotch; for, says he, there are offices established in Scotland where every Scotchman must apply for a passport ere he can leave the country, and previous to the granting thereof, he is examined with regard to his intellects and education, which, should they not arrive to the standard fixed for each, no passport is granted, but he is sent back for improvement; on a second application, the same form is observed; but should he apply a third time, and then be found wanting, he is remanded back for life. By this, says his Lordship, your Ladyship will plainly see none but men of sense and learning can legally leave this country. "Then, replied her Ladyship, I am sure your Lordship was smuggled."

PENSACOLA, (West-Florida) APRIL 5, 1767.

House of Assembly, Friday, 3d of April, 1767.

Report of a Committee of the whole House appointed to take the present state of the Government of this province into consideration.

1st. RESOLVED,

THAT the House will on all occasions, support and maintain his Honour the Lieutenant Governor's administration, in conformity to his Majesty's intentions, and that they will, in as far as in them lies, endeavour to render the same easy, happy, and honourable to him; and that they will at all times maintain the just prerogative of the Crown, as well as the rights and liberties of the people.

2d. RESOLVED, That the pretending or attempting to exercise the Government of this province, or the issuing proclamations or orders in the name of the Governor, without the advice and consent of his Majesty's Council, is contrary to his most gracious Majesty's royal instructions, and a dangerous and unwarrantable innovation in the constitution.

3d. RESOLVED, That the obliging the Members of the Assembly to meet at the expiration of every prorogation, when the public business does not require it, is attended with many inconveniences, besides giving unnecessary trouble to the Members.

4th. RESOLVED, That these irregularities seem to proceed from his Honour the Lieutenant Governor's being advised thereto, by some weak or evil disposed persons.

5th. RESOLVED, That whatever person or persons have advised his Honour the Lieutenant Governor to exercise the civil Government of this province, without the aid, advice, and assistance of his Majesty's Council, are enemies to his Majesty, to his Honour the Lieutenant Governor, to the Constitution, and to the laws and liberties of the people.

6th. RESOLVED, That such persons are endeavouring to innovate and alter the civil constitution established by his Majesty in this province, to alienate the minds of the people from his Honour's administration, to destroy public peace and harmony among us, and throw every thing into anarchy and confusion.

7th. RESOLVED, That his Honour the Lieutenant Governor be humbly requested to remove such persons from his presence, and that in conformity to his Majesty's instructions, do make choice of such able and discreet persons to fill up the vacancies in his Majesty's council, as are most capable to aid and assist him in his administration.

By order of the Committe,
ALEXANDER MOORE, Chairman.

The House having resumed itself, it was Resolved, Nem. Con. That Mr. Speaker do, in the name of the House, communicate to his Honour the Lieutenant Governor the foregoing Resolutions, when the House attend his Honour.

CHARLES-TOWN, JUNE 30.

LETTERS from Pensacola, make mention of a Reinforcement of Spanish Troops being arrived at New-Orleans; Part of which, with a Convoy of Provisions, and some Presents for the Indians, was gone up the Mississippi, to take Possession of the Territories on the Western Side of the River, ceded to Spain.

The same Letters add, that the French Government still continues at New-Orleans.

Extract of a Letter from London, dated April 18.

"The Opposition has received a considerable Check by the Death of the Marquis of Tavistock, which has so affected his Father, the Duke of Bedford, that he avoids all publick Business. The State of American Affairs is to be taken under Consideration by the House of Commons on the 30th Instant, both Houses being adjourned for the Holidays, to the 28th; and immediately after, the East-India Affairs come on. Lord Chatham, notwithstanding all the Efforts of his Opponents, still keeps his Ground."

Wednesday last the Body of JAMES RIGGS, an Apprentice Lad to Capt. Peter Mallet, who had been missing two Days, floated up into Col. Beale's Dock, being cut under his Chin from Ear to Ear: A Jury of Inquest sat on the Body, and next Day brought in their Virdict Wilful Murder by Persons unknown; since which, two Apprentice Lads have been committed to Goal on Suspicion of being the Perpetrators.

The distressed Situation of the poor Irish Protestant Settlers lately arrived here, having incited the Compassion of several worthy Gentlemen, a Subscription, for their immediate Relief, was set on Foot, and in a very short Time, to the Honour of the Inhabitants of this Province, upwards of Two Hundred Pounds Sterling was raised, which will afford great Assistance to those unhappy People, who are much in Want of the Necessaries of Life.—Subscriptions continue to be received by the Church-Wardens of both Parishes.——SAGE being much wanted, Gentlemen in the Country who have any to Spare, will receive the hearty Thanks of those distressed People, by sending it to the New-Barracks.
